Training Methodology

This course uses a variety of adult learning styles to aid full understanding and comprehension. Participants will view trainer-led presentations to understand all elements of an effective procurement department and the essential skills required to maintain an effective and profitable supply chain.

They will work in groups to conduct role-playing activities to enhance their negotiation skills to secure high-end contracts and undergo scenario training to help them keep stakeholders on the side when an issue occurs. They will have the opportunity to review real-world case studies to understand the impacts of mutually beneficial procurement relationships and help them select the best suppliers for their future organisations.

Summary

Strategic procurement practices are essential for organisations seeking to optimise their supply chain and enhance overall operational efficiency.

This approach involves a holistic and forward-thinking strategy in sourcing goods and services to meet organisational objectives. Effective strategic procurement goes beyond mere cost considerations; it involves assessing supplier capabilities, fostering long-term partnerships, and mitigating risks in the supply chain.

This practice encompasses market analysis, supplier segmentation, and implementing technology-driven solutions for streamlined procurement processes. By aligning procurement with broader organisational goals, businesses can leverage their purchasing power, negotiate favourable contracts, and drive innovation in the supply chain. Strategic procurement practices contribute to cost savings and enhance resilience, agility, and competitiveness in a dynamic business environment.
